You only need to check a few situations.

#01

What exactly is an administrative appeal?

An administrative appeal is a system that allows individuals to challenge an incorrect decision made by a government agency or a public institution.

#02

In what cases can I file an administrative appeal?
Can foreigners file appeals as well?

Absolutely. Foreigners residing in the Republic of Korea are also eligible to file administrative appeals. Unfair dispositions, such as refusal to extend the period of stay, employment-related measures, revocation of departure orders, or refusal of naturalization, may all be subject to

#03

Is it possible to file an appeal in every case?

Not always. Certain matters, such as replies to civil petitions, responses to inquiries, statutory interpretations, contracts, and issues related to relationships between private individuals, are not subject to administrative appeals.

#04

So, yes, it is a system that you can use when you disagree with an administrative decision!

NO

What if the procedures are too difficult for me?

Do not worry! By using the court-appointed Defense Counsel System, you can receive free legal assistance.

Free of charge?
That is a tremendous help!

#05

What do I need to prepare in order to file an appeal?

Prepare the written appeal (in Korean), documentary evidence, and any required authentication certificates in advance.

Being well-prepared makes it much easier for your appeal to be accepted.

#06

OK! Where do I submit my appeal?

You have two options:
1) Submit two copies of the written appeal to either the disposition-issuing authority (the administrative agency that made the disposition), or the competent administrative appeals commission; or 2) Register as a user on the online administrative appeals website and file your appeal through the "Appeals and Applications" menu.
